It was said in financial circles to day that the late Mr. Huntington's successor as President of the Southern Pacific will be M. E. Ingalis, President of the Big Four road.

The story gains credibility from the fact that Mr. James Speyer, of the banking firm of Speyer & Co., was in Europe at the time of Mr. Huntington's death and hurried back to this country to participate in the naming of his successor. It was through the Speyers that Mr. Huntington retained his presidency of the system.

Much of his Southern Pacific stock was placed with them in exchange for loans when he was temporarily embarrassed during the panic of 1893 and the firm subsequently headed the syntiacate that bought in the Crocker and Sanford holdings in the system. They have an absolutely controlling interest and can be determine who he shall be.
